

Comprehensive Oral Health Assessment and Treatment

What is a Dental COHAT?

A Comprehensive Oral Health Assessment and Treatment (Dental COHAT) involves a full dental probing and examination of the oral cavity with analysis of each tooth. Intra-oral x-rays are taken to check the status of all the tooth roots. Plaque and tartar are removed with hand and ultrasonic scaling instruments. The teeth are then polished to smooth out any rough surfaces and make it more difficult for bacteria to stick to the teeth. This level of oral health care cannot be provided to animals without full general anesthetic, as it is impossible to address the teeth below the gumline in an awake animal.

Dental Extractions

After completion of a full oral exam and scaling/polishing of all healthy teeth, any teeth that are fractured or have severely compromised periodontal ligaments are extracted to prevent infection and chronic pain.

Animals' teeth have very long roots, and many of them are multi-rooted. As such, teeth must be sectioned with a dental drill and slowly elevated to make sure that no part of the root is left behind.

How long this process takes depends on the overall health of the mouth, age, size, and breed of the dog, as well as what is wrong with the tooth that requires extractions.
